TO HURT AT HOSPITAL DOOR.
LONDON, July 12.—Seven persons were injured when a double-decked street car jumped the tracks and crashed into a building in the northwestern part of London last night. The accident occurred in front of an army hospital, and the whole class of doctors and nurses rendered first aid as quickly as they probably prevented fatalities.

WILSON MAY MAKE PERSONAL APPEAL FOR POLISH RELIEF

Tells Delegation He Is Up Against a Stone Wall but Will Still Work On.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—President Wilson may make a personal appeal to the ruling monarchs of the belligerent nations of Europe to save Poland from starvation.
Replying to the appeal for such action made to him to-day by a delegation representing the Polish organizations of the country, the President strongly indicated that if all other measures fail he will take the question up personally.
The President told the delegation the Polish situation "has engaged my thought constantly and I do not think there is any matter to which our State Department has devoted more constant and repeated effort than that of trying to get relief to Poland. I know the terrible conditions, the tragic conditions, that exist there, and nobody could know them without feeling his heart torn with the knowledge that something must be done.

"I am simply up against a stone wall in the matter of exacting for food to these without compromising the situation and without, I conjecture, doing a greater disaster to Poland than this service."
"Her only friends are apparently at a disadvantage, but I can assure you that every kind of pressure that can be brought will be brought and I am being brought to the accomplishment of this object. I desire, as well as all those associated with me to help her, and, as a reminder, it was most unnecessary that you should come here."
"I mean I was not forgetful of Poland and was not likely to be forgetful of her, but that makes your visit none the less impressive and none the less welcome, and you may be sure that I will continue to do everything that is possible."
Senator Hitchcock introduced the delegation, led by John P. Ruzicki of Chicago, a member of the Polish Central Relief Committee, and N. L. Piotrowski, former City Attorney of Chicago, who personally investigated conditions in Poland. Mr. Ruzicki told the President that apparently a deliberate sentence of death has been passed against the people of Poland.

FAIL TO AGREE ON PLAN FOR FEEDING OF POLAND

Britain's Latest Suggestion Transmitted to German Foreign Office by Gerard.

BERLIN, July 12.—Ambassador Gerard has transmitted to the Foreign Office the latest British suggestions regarding arrangements for feeding the population of Poland. The Ambassador is discouraged over the inability of the two countries to reach an agreement.
Gerard expects to visit a few more prison camps before going to Copenhagen for a brief vacation.

CHEER UP! THE WORST IS COMING IN HEAT LINE

Weather Man Says These Sticky Days are Due to Last Quite a While.

Been a bit stick for the past two days, hasn't it?
Chorus by entire company—"It has!"
It isn't going to cheer you to any extent to learn that there's no relief in sight. If anything, it is going to get stickier and stickier. So you might as well conserve your supply of profanity. The weather for the next few days is going to keep all the steam-heated words working overtime.
About the most cheerful news the weather men had to offer to-day was that the long awaited offensive of old General Humidity, which began yesterday morning, had been effectively halted, a light breeze from the southwest driving the old warrior's forces back all along the line.
The humidity at 1 o'clock this morning was eighty-four, as against ninety-eight yesterday. The highest temperature yesterday was eighty-five on the twenty-ninth floor, of course—but to-day the mercury is expected to scale the ninety mark. And to-morrow. And the next day. The whole middle section of the country is in the grip of the heat wave. So cheer up. You're not the only one.

FALL FROM TRAIN KILLS
TRUST COMPANY TELLER
But Stories Differ as to Exact Way in Which A. S. Anderson of Brooklyn Met Death.
Alexander S. Anderson, receiving teller of the Franklin Trust Company, Brooklyn, was killed last night by falling from a B. R. T. train to the street just south of the Court Street Station.
There was no one on the station platform at the time. The accounts of persons in the street conflict with the story of a passenger on the train whose name could not be learned.
One version is that the teller tried to board the train when it was in motion; that the guard refused to open the gate; that Mr. Anderson clung to it until the train had pulled by the station, and then he stepped off, no knowing where he had moved so far. He stepped into air.
Another report was that he accidentally fell off the rear platform of the last car.
Mr. Anderson lived at No. 2263 East Fifteenth Street. He leaves a widow and one child.

FIRE AT KNICKERBOCKER.
Awning of Restaurant Burned—Damage Is Trifling.

An awning outside the restaurant on the ground floor of the Hotel Knickerbocker, Broadway and Forty-second Street, caught fire in some unknown manner early this morning and was destroyed.
Few of the guests knew of the blaze and the damage was trifling, but the firemen were called out, with Deputy Chief Martin in charge.

Ex-Judge Blanchard Buried.
The funeral of former Justice James Armstrong Blanchard took place to-day at his home, No. 11 East Ninety-second Street. Interment was at Woodlawn Cemetery. The honorary pallbearers were Justice Peter A. B. Hendon, Judge A. Phillips, Vernon M. Davis, John A. Goff, Leonard A. Gierach, Edward B. Finch, Irving Leiman and former Justice Henry A. Gilchrist.

A FELLOW FEELING.
(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)
"And don't forget to give the canary fresh water every day," said Mrs. Rounder, as she bade her husband goodbye at the depot. "And don't forget to water the ferns. And don't forget to give the goldfish fresh water."
"Don't worry," replied Mr. Rounder. "I won't forget. I know what thirst is."

RUSSO-JAP TREATY
"AIMED AT GERMANY, NOT UNITED STATES"

High Official of Czar Declares It Does Not Involve "Open Door" Policy in China.

PETROGRAD, July 12.—The charge that Japan's possible fear of the United States was the motive behind the new Russo-Japanese treaty was officially denied to-day by Countor G. Rozov, of the Department of Foreign Affairs. He told the United Press that the new treaty contains no cause for alarm in the United States and does not involve the "open door" policy in China.
His attention was called to an article in a Petrograd daily newspaper, containing the intimation that the Japanese-American situation was a motive inspiring the treaty.
"That is utterly absurd," he said. "The Russo-Japanese treaty was aimed at Germany. America was not thought of."
"Before the war Germany constantly talked of China. She had a well formed policy to increase her sphere of influence there. She repeatedly attempted to induce Russia to join against Japan to block Japanese interests."
"Therefore, the treaty really had a two-fold purpose. First, Russia for the next decade must concentrate her attention on Europe, having no time to look eastward, so she felt the need of an ally in the Far East to protect her interests there. Secondly, Russia has no intention of allowing Germany to do to China what she did to Turkey. That is all there is to it. America can dismiss as baseless the talk of the treaty being levelled at her. This treaty is really the last of three—all similar. The first, in 1905, stipulated an agreement between Russia and Japan on Manchurian politics. The second, in 1916, setting together with the third, in 1916, merely a step further.

"I think open door policy is in no way involved. There need be no uneasiness in the United States."
